Abstract	Sue Cassidy Clark was a music journalist and photographer who specialized in soul, gospel, and rock music in the late 1960s and early 1970s. The Sue Cassidy Clark papers include Clark's recorded interviews, interview transcripts, photographs, published articles, correspondence, handwritten notes, clippings, promotional print material, and commercial sound recordings.

Biographical/Historical note

Sue Cassidy Clark was a music journalist and photographer who specialized in soul, gospel, and rock music in the late 1960s and early 1970s. She authored the books Rock: A World Bold as Love (Cowles, 1970) and The Superstars: In Their Own Words (Music Sales, 1972), and she contributed articles and record reviews to several periodicals, including Billboard, Black Stars, Creem, Hit Parader, Rolling Stone, Rock, Soul Illustrated, and Soul Sounds.

Scope and Contents note

The collection includes recorded interviews that Clark conducted with significant and influential African-American musicians, typed transcriptions of many of these interviews, copies of published articles, photographs, many of which were taken by Clark, correspondence, handwritten notes, research material (including clippings and promotional print material), and her collection of recordings. The papers are arranged into seven series, "Artists," "Other Topics," "Periodicals," "Printed Music," "Scrapbooks," "Commercial Recordings," and "Audio Interview Cassettes." Many of the individuals with whom Clark conducted interviews were musical pioneers, and the period in which the interviews took place was a time when American popular music was evolving rapidly. Clark's interviews with these artists provide a snapshot of many of them at their artistic and commercial peaks, and the questions she poses on such topics as the directions soul music was taking, the performers' relationship to their audiences, and the artists' reflections on other musicians (contemporary and past) provide considerable insight into the American musical landscape at that time. For a number of the musicians Clark interviewed, there are not many other recorded interviews in existence, and some of the musicians she interviewed are now deceased.

Series V: Scrapbooks 1950-1966Scope and Contents note

The five scrapbooks in this series contain material relating to Clark's interest in jazz and her personal acquaintance with numerous jazz musicians during the 1950s and 1960s. The scrapbooks primarily include clippings; other materials include promotional material, flyers, original photographs, correspondence, and handwritten notes. Because of the poor physical condition of the scrapbooks, unique and rare items (such as Clark's original photographs of musicians, handwritten notes, and correspondence) have been removed and placed in separate folders. In instances where scrapbook pages contain handwritten captions describing these items, photocopies of the original scrapbook pages are included alongside the refoldered items.
